There are many types of mental disorders. People with substance abuse disorders are at risk for overdose and death. The only information that can be reported to the University is aggregate in nature and pertains to general information regarding the number of screenings that take place, the results of the screenings, and general demographic information. Your primary care provider may use a mental health screening to see if you need to go to a mental health provider. If you are diagnosed with a mental disorder, it's important to get treatment as soon as possible. They affect more than half of all Americans at some point in their lives. There are many types of providers who treat mental disorders. These mental disorders are different than normal sadness or grief. Some of the most common disorders include: Depression and mood disorders. In the United States, you can call the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 1-800-273-TALK (1-800-273-8255) If you are a veteran, call the Veterans Crisis Line at 1-800-273-8255 or send a text to 838255 Your primary care provider may give you a physical exam and ask you about your feelings, mood, behavior patterns, and other symptoms. The effects of mental disorders range from mild to severe to life-threatening. You may need a mental health screening if you have symptoms of a mental disorder. This usually takes less than five minutes. If you are being tested by a mental health provider, he or she may ask you more detailed questions about your feelings and behaviors. (L.P.C.). But they do not have medical degrees. These are among the most serious psychiatric disorders. They can't prescribe medicine, but can work with providers who are able to. Advanced practice registered nurses (APRNs) are specially trained nurses who have a master's or doctoral degree in psychiatric nursing. They can also prescribe medicine. Psychologist, a professional trained in psychology. You may have slight pain or bruising at the spot where the needle was put in, but most symptoms go away quickly. A core value and objective of this screening is to preserve participants' anonymity. After the needle is inserted, a small amount of blood will be collected into a test tube or vial. Bipolar disorder, formerly called manic depression. The University cannot identify you through your responses. Each screening will take 4 to 5 minutes to complete. People with PTSD feel stressed and afraid, even long after the danger is over. When you click on the link below, you will leave the University of Washington's web page. The University does not manage or control web sites not owned by the University. Substance abuse and addictive disorders. If you are thinking about hurting yourself or about suicide, seek help right away. Symptoms vary depending on the type of disorder, but common signs may include: Excessive worrying or fear, Extreme sadness, Major changes in personality, eating habits, and/or sleeping patterns, Dramatic mood swings, Anger, frustration, or irritability, Fatigue and lack of energy, Confused thinking and trouble concentrating, Feelings of guilt or worthlessness, Avoidance of social activities. One of the most serious signs of a mental disorder is thinking about or attempting suicide. These disorders involve excessive use of alcohol or drugs. You may also be asked to fill out a questionnaire about these issues. If you are already seeing a mental health provider, you may get a mental health screening to help guide your treatment. They assess, diagnose, and treat a variety of mental health disorders. Mental disorders are common. People with bipolar disorder have alternating episodes of mania (extreme highs) and depression. These disorders cause obsessive thoughts and behaviors related to food and body image. Other names: mental health assessment, mental illness test, psychological evaluation, psychology test, psychiatric evaluation. A mental health screening is used to help diagnose mental disorders. It can also continue into adulthood. Take the opportunity to fill out a brief self-assessment test for Depression, Bipolar Disorder, Generalized Anxiety Disorder, Alcohol or Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder. Since people can suffer from these disorders at the same time, or one can cause symptoms that seem like the other, you may want to take all of the screenings offered. You don't need any special preparations for a mental health screening. L.P.C.s diagnose and provide counseling for a variety of mental health problems. It is not intended to be used as a substitute for a visit with a health care professional. The University has counselors available to meet with you and discuss the results of your online screening at your request. They can't prescribe medicine, unless they have a special license. ADHD is one of the most common mental disorders in children. Answering "no response" will have no impact on the results of the test. Psychologists diagnose and treat mental health disorders. Your screening score is informational, not diagnostic. It indicates whether your responses are consistent with Depression, Bipolar Disorder, Generalized Anxiety Disorder, Alcohol or Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder and where to call for help. If you have any questions or concerns about the privacy and security of the online screening tool, please review the privacy policy prior to beginning the screening. Schizophrenia and psychotic disorders. Eating disorders may cause people to severely limit the amount of food they eat, excessively overeat (binge), or do a combination of both. Some psychologists work with providers who are able to prescribe medicine. Licensed clinical social worker (L.C.S.W.) has a master's degree in social work with training in mental health. They offer one-on-one counseling and/or group therapy sessions. Post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). Some have additional degrees and training. But training requirements vary by state.
